The Celts and the Sea

Blow the wind southerly, southerly, southerly/Blow bonnie breeze my true lover to me –Blow the Wind Southerly, traditional song. The sea looms large in Celtic culture. Boats constantly set out from the rocky coast, for fishing, for exploration or for immigration. For those at sea and those waiting on shore, the time was best passed singing of separation and the joy of the return home.

▼ ELEMENTS IN BALANCE

The cool ethereal blues of air and water meet the warm tones of fire and earth. Kyanite—the gemstone of dreams—lifts your spirit, while copper keeps you grounded. Blue pearls, crystals and kyanite are accented with eternal knotwork in glowing copper. Earwires are hypoallergenic niobium; necklace is 18" long. Made in USA.
