The Art of Illumination

The Celts raised the knotwork design to a lively artform, working their decorative magic on stone, in metal, and most famously across the pages of painstakingly illuminated manuscripts. Minutely detailed paintings link decorative knotwork, animals and humans in elaborate patterns, a reminder of the enduring strands of continuity and interconnectedness that twine all creation.

◀ THE LINDAU COLLECTION

The far-reaching influence of Celtic art is seen in the 8th century Lindau Gospel of Switzerland, a dense interlace of Celtic knotwork rendered in precious metals. These reproduction covers convey the opulent original in amazing detail: the feel of inlay and jewels, and raised-texture knotwork and medallions. Large and Standard journals and Guest Book feature fully decorated flap with magnetic closure. Small, Mini and Slim have hand-sewn perfect binding. Lie-Flat Journal features Coptic binding to lie completely flat when open. All books have acid-free pages, a memento pouch inside the back cover, and a ribbon to mark your place. See gaelson.com for the complete collection.
